THE DAILY NEWS

The Official Organ of the City.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1892.

JOHN D. CAMPBELL, Editor.

THE DAILY NEWS is the only paper in the City of Raleigh that takes the telegraphic reports.

OUR TERMS:—

Advertising Rates.—Per square (ten lines, nonpareil) first insertion $1.00; each subsequent insertion 50 cents. Contract for advertisements of any space of time can be made at the counting-room of the News Office.

CONTRACTORS will positively not be allowed to exceed their space, or advertise other than the legitimate business, except by special permission of the News Office.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.—Daily, one year, $3.00; six months, $1.50; three months, $1.00; six months, 75 cents; invariably in advance.

Notice to Correspondents.

No letter can be published in these columns which is not authenticated by the name of its author. This we require, not for publication, but as a guarantee of the good faith of correspondents. Persons who violate this rule will have their communications consigned to the waste-basket.

THE WEEKLY NEWS is the cheapest paper published in North Carolina. It is only one dollar per year, postage paid, contains 52 columns of plain printed news from every section of the country, and important advertisements. Always Cash.

The charge on all sums under five hundred dollars is twelve and a half cents, and all above is twenty-five cents.

THERE is much buoyancy in the New York stock market in what are known as the "Granger stocks," the tendency to speculation being based on the probable repeal of the law. There is said to be so much unemployed money on the New York market that every little chance for quick profits is seized on at once. And this is what keeps the country so poor—too much idle money. Ah, money, money; it causes more trouble and ruins more souls than liquor itself, when kept idle and put out to no good purpose. Let capitalists set their money to healthy work and the country would hum like a bee-hive with prosperity.

Gen. Cook, Babcock's counsel, told Grant Wednesday there was not sufficient evidence to convict his friend John.

THE News a few days ago contained the following:

"We have heard that Colonel H. professes to have renounced his allegiance to the party since his appointment in 1872."

A correspondent of a neighbor deliberately misquoted the paragraph, and worked himself into a fever of indignation over the alleged charge that Col. Humphrey's vote for Merrimon in 1872 was renouncing the party. The News made no such intimation. Does "Wayne" think his misrepresentation fair?

A well known negro in Lynchburg recently died a very singular death. He called loudly for the "blood to be caught in a pan," and kept crying out he would "never do so again." He then says the Lynchburg News in a clear and connected manner that about three years ago a white man, whom he knew to have a large sum of money, drank at his bar and got stabbed by him. He cut the customer's throat with the razor, concealed his body, and at night, assisted by his brothers (named by us), he sunk the remains in the canal with a heavy weight attached, appropriating the stranger's money. He continued that canal was subsequently dragged by the authorities, which we remember to have been done, but the body having been covered by the mud was not discovered. His last cries were prayers that the horrid scene of the murder should be hidden from his eyes, and he died, praying forgiveness for the crime he committed. The News believes every word of the negro's statement to be the truth.

THE SOUTH AND THE CURRENCY.

It seems to be generally taken for granted that the Southern States, with the exception of Texas, are thoroughly committed to the theory of inflation, and that their influence will be injuriously felt in the National Democratic Convention. On the other hand, journals whose self-asserted independence is only a cover to their efforts to draw honest Independents into the Republican party, profess great indignation at the thought that the South is subordinating the question of currency to the good of the Democratic party, which they are pleased to call a sacrifice of principle.

There is no essential difference between the people of North Carolina, for example, and the people of any other section in the matter of self-interest. Those who have money, stocks, and bonds, are naturally desirous that the return to specie payment should be hastened by every possible means. Those who are in debt, whose lands are mortgaged, and who view the future with well-justified apprehension, are naturally averse to paying gold for a greenback debt. Nay more, they would gladly welcome an abundant inflation, if by that means they could pay off a debt of a thousand dollars with five hundred dollars in value. We are not discussing the question upon its merits and do not desire to be understood as endorsing either view.

As the accumulation of capital and of creditors is in the wealthy Northern States, and the debtors abound in the South, it is to be expected that the opponents of a repeal of the Resumption Act the South is unanimous. But among the mass of the people there is no general interest in the currency question. It is swallowed up in the absorbing desire to see the country in the hands of a constitutional party; to feel once again that we are no longer outcasts in our fathers' house. To this end, sacrificing no principle, but yielding our own interests for the common welfare, we are ready, to-day, to accept the platform of the Democratic party and to yield it unquestioned obedience. In the formation of that platform North Carolina's delegates will only insist upon maintaining the honor and the credit of the nation, and upon the course which will most certainly unite all sections in its support. At the same time they will protest against any policy which will cripple the industries of their State. We believe that honest government is our great want, and when that is assured "all these things will be added unto us"—an honest currency, a prosperity based upon sure foundations.

The News desires to see the National Democratic Convention held in the city of Cleveland, in the midst of a hard-money population. We desire the people of Ohio to know that the wild speculations of the Cincinnati Enquirer are not endorsed by the best judgment of the party; and at the same time that the course taken by the New York Democracy last year in their cowardly snubs at William Allen and his supporters merits the severe condemnation of every loyal Democrat.

We believe that during the next six months the country will see the Democratic party united upon a platform which will assure the maintenance of the credit of the government, which will bring the currency surely, though perhaps gradually, to the specie basis.

To that platform the people of North Carolina pledge a zealous and unflinching support.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Forest planting is thriving in Minnesota. The St. Paul and Pacific Railroad has set out over four million young trees, and altogether it has been estimated that twenty millions have been planted on the prairie lands.

Pinchback, however, is justified in complaining that the Senate keeps him hanging by the eyelids, not because anybody will do him wrong, but for his status, but for the convenience of men like Senator Morton, who are intent upon having the colored men turn the grind-stones for them and grind their own axes on.

Philadelphia Telegraph (Rep.)

We hazard little in saying that Mr. Blaine isn't half done bidding for Cincinnati. He will next bid for fraternity, peace, and universal brotherhood, and will close his political gymnastics by making a grand bid to the prostrated industry and trade of the country by saying that we must resume until we have something to resume with.—Philadelphia Times (Ind.)

Non Bulow says: "For a certain kind of technical knowledge and depth of musical cultivation, Boston stands first. But for a breadth of comprehension, a downright thirst for good music and a keen appreciation of it, give me Philadelphia. It is the most sensitive musical audience I have played to in this country."—N. Y. Herald.

"What do you think of the present jury system?" inquired a man of an old Chicago ex-Judge the other evening. "Think," echoed the old man in disgust, "Why, I think it getting so that if a man should plead guilty of murder, and try to get hung, the jury would, somehow or other, manage to acquit him." The other man said that it looked about that way to him too.

The chief consideration in the minds of members of Congress of both parties seems to be, not what is demanded in the way of legislation for the welfare of the nation, but what will be the political effect of this or that movement, and what can be done to promote the interests of the party. Both parties are playing with the only card which will win, interest and doing nothing for them.—Boston Globe (Ind.)

Editor Sentinel—I take the liberty of suggesting the name of Major Henry A. Gilliam, of Edenton, for Attorney General. He has all the qualities which the place and office require. He is a man of high ability and happy mode of canvassing among the people. (Good suggestion.)

The inhabitants of Dedham, Mass., are excited over the recent unveiling of an historic damson or tomb in that city. A number of common Indian mounds are near the town, and opposite them, some two hundred feet from the Charles river, was a woman's grave, a piece of rock, a kind of tub, about three feet in diameter. Rolling this away, a regular archway was discovered, leading into the hillside. The mouth of the arch was a round shape, some two feet high by three broad. The walls and floor were evenly and carefully built of unburned stone, cemented with a species of mud plaster, no lime or cement being found in the whole structure. The passage way widened until, after some feet of length, it expanded into a wide cell some ten feet in diameter. "One wall of this was artificial, the back of natural rock, and the other side artificial, but of irregular shape. The cell was some five feet high, and carefully floored throughout. The Norwester, Puritans, and Indians are severally credited with having built the tomb. The discovery is to be investigated.

Mr. E. D. Winslow, it appears is an honor to his ancestors. He comes of a family of disreputable characters and law breakers, who were well known in, and around Bar. Thomas Winslow was repeatedly arrested for counterfeiting, and at last a box of bad bills was found in his cellar. His brother Mark was one of the most noted counterfeiters in the State, and ended his life by suicide rather than serve out a sentence of 12 years. Edward, another brother followed the same trade, and spent about half his time in jail. Lucretia, a sister was in the gang and signed the bills. Afterward, removing to Pennsylvania, she became the wife of a reputed lawbreaker, who was hanged for murder, and had herself a narrow escape from conviction as an accomplice. Still later, she joined a strolling theatrical company, and died in the South. She was a person of talent and winning manners, but of no principle. Two other sisters of the Winslows married well known counterfeiters. This family history accounts both for the cleverness and the crime of the Boston gang. He had inherited a taste for deception and for getting money dishonestly earned.

"It is only a slight attack I'll let it take care of itself." A slight neglect—slight delay may entail on the person unpleasant and perhaps fatal consequences. As a cure for indigestion, bilious attacks, fever and ague, and female sickness, the celebrated Home Stomach Bitters is without equal.

(From the Brooklyn Eagle, 12 A CLERICAL HERO.

The Bravery of a Priest—How He saved the life of a Ferry-Boat and Saved a Woman's Life.

Rev. Thomas N. Adams, assistant pastor of St. Vincent de Paul's Roman Catholic Church, on North Sixth street, yesterday afternoon saved the life of a rash woman who attempted suicide by jumping from a ferry boat. The circumstances of the affair, and the bravery of Father Adams, were much commented on when the particulars of the occurrence were learned, and many were the encomiums bestowed on him.

It would appear that while crossing on the Houston street ferry boat Maspeth, at about 5 o'clock, and when putting into the New York slip, a respectable dressed woman was seen to go near the deck and after getting near the outside chains, to jump overboard. Several parties saw her take the leap, and the cry of a woman overboard, was instantly raised. Nearly every person on the boat seemed partially paralyzed at the sight, and no one dared to jump into the water. She was quickly drifting out into the river, and was over forty yards away from the boat, but still the deck hands and passengers were after her with their rescue.

Father Adams was on the front deck when she jumped into the water, but attracted by the cries and shrieks of the woman, he went to the side of the boat in confusion. To throw off his coat and hat was the work of a moment, and two seconds later he dashed through the crowd and sprang into the water.

The tide was swift, and the woman was rapidly drifting further out. She was completely exhausted, and sinking for the third and probably for the last time, when by strong, skillful strokes he reached her. She immediately caught him around the neck, and for a couple of minutes he desperately tried to keep her afloat. He seemed to revive her considerably, but the priest found himself fast floating. With an effort he threw the woman from him, and floating on his back, he held her up on his legs and feet.

Meantime the crowd on the Maspeth were unable, or had no proper life-saving apparatus to render any assistance. All the deck hands and pilot collected on the rear deck, and were profuse in the giving of instructions as to what to do. Life-preservers were thrown to the now nearly exhausted clergyman, but he refused to avail himself of their use. No other assistance was rendered by them, except that they called lustily to boats passing up and down the river, and at a long distance off, to come to their aid. Father Adams was now in the river over fifteen minutes, and his strength was fast failing him, but he still held on to the woman, who the tug boat Uncle Abe, Captain Lewis, described them and quickly steered to them. When it reached them he had given up all hopes of rescue, and was completely exhausted and chilled by the water. They were taken on board and revived. Restoratives were applied, and after some difficulty they were resuscitated, after which they were taken ashore.

The woman was taken to Union Market Police Station, New York, where she described herself as Mrs. Annie May, aged 27 years, of 199 Cannon street. She is respectfully connected, and is supposed to have been temporarily insane when she jumped into the river.

Father Adams, contrary to the advice of the passengers on board the Maspeth, insisted on going home in his wet clothes. Fears were entertained that he would take cold, but his appearance on the altar to celebrate mass this morning dispelled them. Father Adams is only about thirty years of age. While finishing his education in Spain, for an act of extraordinary bravery he was knighted and the title of Sir bestowed on him. At the time of rescuing the woman he wore on his breast the badge of knighthood, which he on this occasion proved himself doubly worthy of.

A Barroom Incident in Arkansas.

A party of men came down from Llano county yesterday and were drinking in the saloon next door above the Capital store. One of them, whose name is Hauner, said that he could whip any man in Austin who had on a "stovepipe hat." They got very excited, and drawing their pistols laid them on the bar room counter. Finally, leaving the saloon, they went down the avenue and were gone about their y-five minutes. As soon as they left the saloon someone named Hauner, and told him about the threats the man had made. Mr. Thompson went into his room, and putting on a silk hat, returned to the saloon. When the parties from Llano returned, Thompson was talking in a jovial sort of way about being a northern man on a tour for his health, but that he believed he could whip any man in Texas. Hauner said, "Well, you are the man for me" or something to that effect, at the same time drawing a six-shooter. But before he could cock it Thompson fired at him, the ball entering near his ear and coming out at the back of his neck. Hauner then started across the street, still trying to cock his pistol, when Thompson fired a second time, the ball taking effect in Hauner's back. Officers coming up, arrested the parties, who gave bond for their appearance at the Mayor's Court.
